This exam allows Weber to augment and solve the problem of the individuality of modern capitalism, which he had put at the center of his interests. In the first part of the book, "Theory of the Socio" Gic Categories", 3 the formulation of fundamental social 3 concepts and elaboracidevelopes A® in precise terminología socioAox (chapter I), Weber tries to establish the main categories "" in the different fields of research ameaA® em socioA® gitic: the econA® A relates the rich AmA®, power relations ps and caste class relations p. """. In Chapter III, referring to the common ideas of science policy, as in the previous chapter, if referring to the common ideas of economic , Weber defines the various bases of the legitimacy of different forms of power. The second part of the treaty, "La economía en relación a la economía social", is dedicated to Analysis of the two-way relationship A<sup>3</sup> (RecProCo conditioning) that exists between the economy and the different forms of social relations. There are three types of : judicial (rational) power, which "is based on confidence in the legality of established systems"; traditional power, which "is based on the daily creed in the sacred character of the traditions which are forever read"; and the charism of power, tico, which "rests on the extraordinary surrender to the sacred character of a person." In Biografías y Vidas, The A<sup>3</sup> understanding of the meaning and measure of this conditioning is the objective that Weber gives over the course of the Acceptance of the various forms of community and association: the community of domaust and its derivatives (chapterII), the community of Special Purpose (IV), the religious community (V), the market community (VI), relations puristic (VII) and the political community (VIII). In the brief chapter IV, "Last part", the concepts of caste and class are distinct and clarified, and especially those of situationau n A<sup>3</sup> caste (conditioned by way of life, by education, by the presbytery) and of situational class A<sup>3</sup> (nically conditioned econA<sup>3</sup>). Es una coincidencia desconcertante que Max Weber haya muerto de una neumonía hace un siglo y hoy el mundo sea víctima de un virus que extermina a decenas de miles por fallas pulmonares y tiene confinados a millones ante su amenaza mortal. Todos tenemos autores, maestros y amigos que, fallecidos, siguen con nosotros, inolvidables, son parte de nuestra vida. 28/1/2021 - Podemos encontrar antecedentes de la crítica a la meritocracia en el libro Economía y sociedad de Max Weber, publicado originalmente en 1902. En dicho texto, el autor menciona que los grupos dominantes tienden a justificar la legitimidad de sus privilegios al considerarlos resultado de su propio mérito (Weber, 2014: 988). La clase social alta a menudo se permite el derroche. Las clases sociales altas, en líneas generales, poseen ingresos económicos muy por encima del promedio de la sociedad, gozando por ende de un estilo de vida más seguro, cómodo y de mayores oportunidades, dado que sus necesidades básicas de alimentación, sustento, habitación y estudios están más que ... Una idea similar a esta es la idea de la "Jaula de hierro", presentado anteriormente por Max Weber en La ética protestante y el espíritu del capitalismo. El libro negro del comunismo afirma que los regímenes comunistas son los responsables de un mayor número de muertes que cualquier otro ideal político o movimiento. Max Weber. Maximilian Weber (1864-1920) fue filósofo, economista, jurista, historiador, politólogo y sociólogo alemán. Se le considera el fundador del estudio moderno de la sociología y la administración pública. Weber inició el estudio sistemático de la burocracia.
